Food Safety – Statutory and Regulatory Compliance

The PRAC Food Bank is committed to comply with provincial, territorial, and regional (as applicable) food safety and public health statutes and regulations as they apply to its activities and initiatives.

The Food Bank manager and the Food Bank Tech person are able to provide:
● Description of the process used to maintain compliance with applicable food safety and public health statutes and regulations; including but not limited to any research from websites, email groups, and other types of notices received regarding legislation around public health.
● Public health inspection report with a passing grade (if applicable); (note: the Food Bank itself does not receive inspections from public health as no commercial cooking activities take place, however, the manager receives public health certification for all seasonal fundraising activities where food is being sold to the public). The Food Bank receives annual fire inspection reports.
